Description

This superb Austrian cold painted bronze study depicts a fox stealthily prowling after some prey. He is in a lowered position to avoid being noticed, highly alert with one ear up and the other down, listening to any sound. This very finely modelled bronze is equally well painted with lots of detail and variation of colour. It is displayed and mounted onto a carved green onyx plinth. The top of which shows a rocky ground with an old tree stump, and the sides are flat and polished. This Austrian cold painted bronze study is in good original condition. Circa 1920 Height 11 cm x width 17 cm x depth 8.5 cm
