Description

This antique 19th-century Victorian writing table in mahogany is a beautifully crafted piece, showcasing excellent quality and elegant period design throughout. Very well made and of good quality, the table features a raised gallery to the top, adding both character and practicality to the piece. The table is fitted with five drawers in total, arranged as two on either side with one centrally placed, all retaining their original knob handles, providing useful storage while maintaining the desk's balanced proportions. Raised on elegant turned legs with its original brass and porcelain casters, the table combines refined craftsmanship with ease of movement and authentic Victorian charm. The mahogany displays gorgeous rich grain and warm colour throughout, enhancing the timeless appeal of the piece. Its desirable deep proportions provide an excellent working surface, making it both practical and decorative. Presented in good condition, this highly desirable Victorian writing table would make a perfect addition to any home, study, or office interior.
