Description

A charming pair of antique oak hall chairs dating from the late 19th century, beautifully crafted with shaped shield backs featuring decorative heraldic crest motifs and turned front legs. These characterful antique chairs display warm solid oak timbers with rich natural grain and excellent aged patina throughout. The shaped backs are decorated with carved roundel details and inset heraldic shield panels, giving the chairs strong Gothic Revival and country house character. Raised on elegantly turned front legs with swept rear supports, the chairs combine decorative appeal with practical use. Perfect for use in a hallway, landing, bedroom, study, or as occasional accent chairs, these antique oak chairs would suit both traditional and eclectic interiors. Their authentic wear and untouched surface add to their charm and originality. A highly decorative and unusual pair of Victorian oak hall chairs with excellent presence and antique character. Height: 86cm Width: 42cm Depth: 48cm
