Description

This antique 20th-century serpentine kneehole desk in mahogany is a beautifully crafted piece, showcasing excellent quality and elegant traditional design throughout. The desk features a graceful serpentine front, giving it a refined and highly desirable shape that enhances its timeless appeal. The piece is fitted with nine drawers in total, arranged as four on either side with one centrally placed above the kneehole, all retaining their original decorative brass handles. The top is finished with a rich red leather writing surface, complementing the warmth and character of the mahogany beautifully. Raised on classic bracket feet, the desk displays gorgeous rich grain, stunning figuring, and warm colour throughout, highlighting the quality craftsmanship and attention to detail. Presented in good condition, this highly desirable example would make a superb addition to any home, study, or office interior. Please note the desk is constructed in one solid piece and does not come apart.
