Description

This antique 19th-century Victorian carved writing table in oak is a beautifully crafted piece, showcasing excellent quality and exceptional attention to detail throughout. Rich in character and traditional craftsmanship, the table is beautifully carved all over, highlighting the high level of workmanship associated with fine Victorian furniture. The piece stands on elegant barley twist legs united by a supportive stretcher, giving it both strength and decorative appeal. The top features a beautiful green leather writing surface which lifts up to reveal useful internal storage, combining practicality with timeless design. A small raised gallery to the back further enhances the table's charm and functionality. The oak displays gorgeous natural grain and warm colour throughout, adding depth and character to this highly desirable example. Presented in good condition, this attractive Victorian writing table would make a perfect addition to any home, study, office, or period interior.
