Description

The subtle differences between good antique Heriz carpets means that they can work in many types of settings. This lovely example from the late 19th century has the merit of a colourful palette with saturated natural dyes that gives it a very happy appearance that would light up any decorative setting. The terracotta background is matched by lovely abraded light blues, greens, golds and a glowing sapphire blue which is seen predominantly in the main border and the central medallion. The classic anchor medallion design often seen on Heriz carpets is very well drawn with lots of space between the motifs so that it feels spacious. In addition, this carpet is an excellent size, a small carpet, which one does not come across in antique Persian carpets. Professionally cleaned, and with some minor restoration to the selvages and ends. Ready for immediate use.
