Description

A chunky little Victorian brooch made of a trio of silver horseshoes studded with nine-carat gold nails. Although in modern times many people think a horseshoe has to be a turned-up U shape to "keep the luck in", the traditional Victorian horseshoe points down and was considered a way to disperse any luck and protect a home rather than holding it in. SIZE: 3 x 1.8cm. WEIGHT: 3.6g. MATERIALS: 925 sterling silver, nine-carat (375) gold.

HALLMARKS/STAMPS: Unclear stamp on the clasp. CONDITION: Good antique condition with light surface wear and tarnish normal for its age. ERA: Victorian (c.1837-1901).
