Description

An elegant Johann Loetz glass vase demonstrating a refined expression of early 20th-century decorative artistry, combining luminous surface effects with sophisticated metalwork. The glass body shimmers with iridescent tones—subtle greens, violets, and golds—shifting beautifully as light plays across its surface, a hallmark of Loetz's celebrated 'papillon' surfaces. Gracefully formed, the vase is enhanced by finely cast bronze mounts that frame and elevate the composition, adding warmth and structural contrast to the ethereal glass, highlighted with dragonflies. The interplay between fluid organic form and solid metal detail reflects the influence of Art Nouveau design. Both decorative and sculptural, the piece exemplifies the harmony of craftsmanship and artistic innovation associated with the famous glassworks.
