Description

A wonderfully charming Art Nouveau bronze flower holder, alive with movement and naturalistic detail. The sculpted base features playful frogs climbing among stylised leaves and stems, capturing that quintessential turn-of-the-century fascination with nature, whimsy, and fluid organic form. The bronze frame supports a tall trumpet-shaped glass vase, perfect for a single bloom or a small arrangement. The contrast between the dark patinated bronze and the clear glass gives the piece a light, elegant presence while retaining all the character of early 20th-century decorative art. This is a delightful accent for a mantel, writing desk, or display cabinet—equally appealing to collectors of Art Nouveau metalwork and those seeking a unique decorative object with personality. Key Features: • Original Art Nouveau bronze with naturalistic frog and foliate motifs • Trumpet-form glass vase held within sculpted bronze tendrils • Beautiful patina and crisp detailing • Decorative, whimsical, and highly collectible. This item could be sent by courier or collection. Please contact me for further details.
