Description

A very good example of a mid 18th century Welsh oak cupboard dresser, the rack with moulded top and central fish tail design above well shaped supports with inset moulded side supports and spice drawers. Below, a four drawer base with panelled sides and fielded panel doors. England. C.1750. This is the most scrumptious piece of 18th century oak furniture you will ever see. The colour and patina is second to none and the shaped canope and sides of the rack are a delight to behold. It is the perfect size for a low ceilinged room in a modern kitchen or in a small cottage - in fact it would work anywhere in any home.
