Description

An antique mahogany bachelor's chest with compact proportions, bracket feet and a practical two-over-three drawer arrangement. The front is fitted with two short upper drawers above three long drawers, each retaining ornate brass plate handles with shaped backplates and drop pulls. The mahogany has a deep reddish-brown tone with visible grain, polished surface variation and subtle wear consistent with age, giving the chest a quietly established character. The drawers are framed by fine moulded edges, with pale timber interiors and traditional dovetail construction visible when open. A moulded top, plain side panels and shaped bracket feet keep the form restrained, while the original-style brass fittings add decorative detail without overwhelming the clean case design. Its modest scale makes it well suited to bedroom storage, a hallway, landing or sitting room, offering the usefulness of a classic antique chest of drawers within both traditional interiors and more layered schemes combining antique and 20th-century furniture. Provenance: Britain Age: Circa 1810
