Description

An Art Deco side table, circa 1930, with an octagonal top and sculptural curved supports. The veneered surface is arranged in a radial pattern, with triangular sections meeting around a circular centre detail and a faceted outer border following the eight-sided outline. The warm golden timber tone and visible grain give the table a decorative quality, while the geometric top reflects the architectural language of early 20th-century design. The base is formed from four sweeping curved legs that rise inward from splayed feet to support the top, joined at the centre by a small rounded stretcher detail with visible brass screw heads. Its compact scale makes it well-suited as a lamp table, drinks table or decorative side table beside a chair or sofa. The combination of octagonal geometry, radial veneer work and arched support structure gives the piece a distinctive Art Deco character without excessive ornament, allowing it to sit comfortably with antique furniture, 1930s interiors or more eclectic 20th-century schemes. Age: Circa 1930s
