Description

An elegant early 19th century First Empire console table of architectural form, the green marble top above a frieze with foliate running guilloche brass mounts supported by two fine pillars with further mounts to the tops and bottoms, the lower shelf with beautifully figure rosewood veneer and heightened with another section of brass decoration, the whole raised on four reeded bun feet. France. C.1810 This very small mirror backed console is perfect for any small London town house or apartment. It would look wonderful in a narrow hallway and magnify the space due to the original mirrored back, in fact a small alcove or landing space would be equally suited to such a little gem.
