Description

A beautifully proportioned late 19th-century mahogany bergère armchair, with exceptional comfort and craftsmanship. Featuring finely reeded front supports, sweeping curved arms, and raised on tapered legs with original brass casters, this handsome chair is a timeless addition to any traditional or contemporary interior. The chair has been professionally re-caned throughout, restoring its crisp, airy appearance while preserving its period character. Newly upholstered arm pads and cushions, covered in quality printed linen and Colefax woven fabric, provide both comfort and sophistication. Richly patinated mahogany, graceful lines, and meticulous restoration make this an outstanding decorative and practical piece—equally at home in a drawing room, library.
