Description

A Superb Quality, Exceptionally Attractive And Extremely Well Figured Matched Pair Of Early George III Period, 18th Century Mahogany Bedside Night Tables, Or Tray Top Commodes, Retaining Good Rich Colour And Patina Throughout, The Shaped Gallery Tray Tops Above Up And Over Cupboard Doors, And Converted Pull Out Drawers With Replacement Old Brass Handles And Unusual Attractive Pierced Fretwork Decoration, Raised On Square Chamfered Legs. An exceptional example of the stereotypical Georgian tray top commode, or bedside night table, this fabulous matched pair of bedside tables have clearly been well loved and cherished throughout the many years of their lives. As is very common they have, at some point in their history, been matched into a pair, however unlike the vast majority of matched pairs you will find, there are only a few discernible differences between the two without extreme close inspection. For reference, the main differences which we have been able to find is a very small difference in the height where the drawer and door meet, a small difference in the size of the handles, a chunkier finish to the roundel decoration on the corners of the top and also one is 3...
