Description

Large 17th-Century Style Dutch Old Master Oil Portrait Painting After Frans Hals Brief Description: This is a superb and rare early 19th-century Dutch Oil on canvas portrait painting depicting a lute player who is wearing a woolly hat with a matching striped pullover. Painted during the 1830s by a follower of the famous 17th-century Dutch golden-age painter Frans Hals (1580-1666). The original, painted c. 1623-1624. Frans Hals (c. 1582-1666) was a towering master of the Dutch Golden Age. Celebrated for his lively, spirited portraits and dynamic group compositions, he revolutionised painting with his loose, impressionistic brushwork and ability to capture spontaneous expressions and psychological depth. The beautiful portrait is full of period charm. The original work now hangs in the Rijks Museum, Amsterdam. The piece is mounted within the original, spectacular quality Dutch carved gesso ebonised frame. Attributes: Oil on Canvas Dutch Circa: Early 19th-century - 1830s Condition: Both the painting and the frame are offered in an overall superb original condition. There are two or three tiny areas of paint loss at the bottom edge of the painting - see images. ...
