Description

A substantial porcelain footed bowl attributed to Edme Samson of Paris and dating from the late nineteenth century. Decorated in the Chelsea-Derby style, the piece displays a deep cobalt-blue ground enriched with gilded ornament and finely painted floral reserves. The exterior is arranged with oval flower panels framed by scrolling gilded foliage, above a carefully executed gilt brickwork border. The interior is centred by a floral bouquet and surrounded by smaller flower sprays, providing decoration across the entire surface. Samson established a reputation for producing sophisticated interpretations of celebrated European porcelains. Their Chelsea and Derby-inspired wares were among the most successful creations of the workshop, often displaying a level of workmanship that led collectors to mistake them for much earlier originals. The scale, colour and quality of decoration make this bowl particularly effective as a cabinet piece or centrepiece. Examples of this size are encountered less frequently than smaller decorative bowls and have strong collector appeal.
