Description

A superb quality Victorian rosewood centre table of elegant octagonal form, standing on four beautifully turned and spiral twist supports united by shaped stretchers and a finely inlaid undertier. The top is particularly attractive, displaying a rich rosewood grain framed by satinwood banding and multiple boxwood and ebony string inlays. To the centre is an exquisite inlaid octagonal panel featuring scrolling foliate marquetry, providing a striking focal point. The quality of the timber throughout is exceptional with wonderful colour, contrast and figuring. The table is finished on all sides making it ideal as a centre table, occasional table or lamp table. Victorian centre tables such as this were designed to occupy a prominent position within the drawing room where they would display lamps, flowers, books and decorative objects whilst also serving as an important statement piece within the home. A highly decorative and practical table with excellent proportions and outstanding craftsmanship. Condition Report Presented in good antique condition with minor age related wear commensurate with age and use. The rosewood has developed a lovely colour and patina and the table i...
