Description

A highly decorative Mid 19th Century Antique English Victorian Copper Samovar of excellent quality, the body of classical amphora form mounted upon an attractively moulded base with four splayed feet, the brass spigot in working order. This samovar, now devoid of interior fittings, would originally have had a white opaline china finial to the cover, which has at some time been replaced with an elegant turned brass replacement, an alteration which in no way detracts however from the beauty of this lovely old piece.
