Description

An exceptional brass and cut glass hall lantern of large proportions, c.1910. Complete with period rise and fall pulley bracket (detachable). The swept arms terminate in fine spirals above a brass lantern frame with an intricate art-nouveau design to the top edge. The thick bevelled glass panels each boast finely cut stars which glisten when illuminated. The panel door is opened with a classical 'scroll in hand' finial. There is some light wear commensurate with age as is to be expected, namely some light scratches to the glass in areas and a very small nibble to the circular cut out edge in the bottom panel. There are two small cut outs in the brass lantern frame (please see photographs); these are uniform, in identical places in the frame and thus appear deliberate, likely to enable glass extraction. The lantern is incredibly substantial and exudes quality throughout.
