Description

A fine early Victorian mahogany breakfast table, dating from the mid-19th century, with an elegant circular tilt-top design and beautifully figured mahogany surface. The table features a superb one-piece circular top displaying rich colour, attractive grain, and the warm mellow tones associated with quality Victorian mahogany. The generous 122cm (48 inch) diameter makes this a highly practical size for dining, breakfasting, or use as a statement centre table. The top is supported on a well-proportioned turned column with a shaped tripod base, featuring elegant swept supports and carved scroll detailing to the feet. The refined simplicity of the design reflects the restrained elegance of the early Victorian period. A versatile and decorative antique table, equally suited to a traditional dining room, country house interior, period property, or as an occasional centre table. Condition: Good antique condition commensurate with age and use. The mahogany retains a lovely depth of colour and patination, with minor age-related marks and surface wear consistent with a table of this period. Please study the photographs carefully, as they form an important part of the descripti...
