Description

A decorative inlaid hardwood Anglo Indian collector's chest. This small collector's chest of drawers is very pleasing to the eye. It is constructed of red hardwood which is heavy and dense. The chest stands on a shaped and moulded plinth with three drawers above and a moulded solid top. All the surfaces on this beautiful piece have been hand inlaid with cut pieces of shimmering mother of pearl in geometric patterns which are matched throughout the top, sides and front. Each drawer is finished with a finely turned central knob. The drawers open to reveal a plain, solid interior constructed and held together with nails. This is typical of locally made pieces made for the English market, often brought home as souvenirs from early travel, big game hunting or military service. It is a useful and decorative piece with a rich colour and superb patina. In good condition, circa 1920. Height 31cm x width 43cm x depth 29cm
