Description

Patinated spelter figure of a woman titled 'Dignite' (Dignity) by the French sculptor Charles Théodore Perron (1862-1934) c.1910. A copy of the large stone original produced in 1906 which stood on the Avenue de la République in the Southern Paris commune of Montrouge. A full length figure of a woman dressed in modest clothing but with some notable allegorical detail. The olive branch of peace in her right hand, a large sword in its scabbard hangs on her left hip, on her head is a crown of laurel leaves signifying victory and crushed below her bare feet is the armoured gauntlet of a warrior. Titled 'Dignite' on the front of the base and signed by Perron in the cast at the side. Very well cast in spelter with a good bronze patinated finish. Excellent condition. Width: 7.5" (19 cm) Height: 25.5" (65 cm) Depth: 7.5" (19 cm)
