Description

An exceptionally elegant antique Edwardian mahogany display cabinet dating from circa 1900, beautifully combining refined craftsmanship, decorative artistry, and practical display space. Constructed from richly figured mahogany, this attractive bow front display cabinet features a graceful glazed door opening to a fabric-lined interior with a shaped display shelf, providing the perfect setting for porcelain, silverware, glassware, treasured collectables, and decorative objects. What truly distinguishes this cabinet are the exquisite hand-painted side panels depicting romantic neoclassical scenes, framed by delicate floral garlands and decorative painted ornamentation. These charming painted reserves capture the elegance and sophistication associated with the finest Edwardian decorative furniture. The bowed glazed frontage enhances both visibility and visual appeal, whilst the elegant breakfront cornice, delicate inlaid detailing, and slender tapering supports create a light and graceful silhouette. The shaped undertier shelf below offers additional display space while contributing to the cabinet's balanced proportions. Fine Edwardian display cabinets featuring origina...
