Description

A magnificent antique 18th century English oak refectory table, Constructed from beautifully matured solid oak, the table features a substantial plank top displaying over two centuries of natural character, rich patination, and authentic wear acquired through generations of use. The warm honey-brown tones and exceptional grain patterns create a depth and authenticity that simply cannot be replicated in modern furniture. The table stands on bold turned oak legs united by traditional stretchers, providing excellent structural strength while creating the classic silhouette associated with early English refectory furniture. Particularly attractive is the finely carved frieze running beneath the top, adding decorative detail while retaining the table's robust country-house character. At an impressive 244cm in length, this is a highly versatile piece capable of seating eight to ten people comfortably, making it ideal as a dining table, kitchen table, farmhouse table, or statement piece within a period property. Dimensions Height: 74cm Length: 244cm Depth: 81cm Condition Presented in good antique condition with age-related wear, marks, patination, and character consistent...
