Description

A pair of sculptural silver bookends depicting stylised fish in an elegant S-curve form. The dimpled bodies feature a circular pierce near the top, with fins and heads forming sturdy bases. Marked "F. Abela & Sons, Hamrun Malta," they display a silver-toned finish with light patina and mid-century character. ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Abela & Sons was a Maltese firm based in Hamrun, one of the island's principal commercial towns during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. The business operated as a retailer and manufacturer associated particularly with silverware, jewellery, and decorative items. Like many Maltese family firms of the period, F. Abela & Sons served both local residents and the steady flow of visitors and naval personnel passing through Malta, which ...
