Description

Woven in fine soumak technique on the face, this half-saddlebag was made by Lori-Bakhtiari tribes inhabiting the Chahar Mahal region of western Persia during the last quarter 19th century. The central field depicts a myriad of small shrubs on dark indigo-blue and surrounded by a powerful border pattern. Once part of double saddle-bags, the top opening of the bag retains its ties and lappets and the back is in madder-red plain-weave. Size: 34 x 34cm (13" x 13").
