Description

A wonderful and versatile George III Pine and sycamore dresser, dating from the early 19th century, originally from a country house. Crafted in solid Sycamore with a beautiful original Pine plank top, this charming piece offers exceptional character and patina developed over centuries of use. Its generous proportions and practical design make it ideal for a variety of uses, including as a traditional dresser base, writing desk, or freestanding kitchen island. The piece retains all the charm and authenticity expected from a genuine Georgian country house furnishing, with a rich colour and surface wear consistent with age. Features: Authentic George III period piece Constructed in solid sycamore with a pine top Versatile use as a dresser, desk, or kitchen island Wonderful country house provenance and character Attractive aged patina and original wear Ideal for both traditional and contemporary interiors A rare and highly adaptable Georgian piece, combining practicality with timeless country house appeal.
