Description

A truly enchanting Edwardian fringe necklace dating to circa 1910, beautifully crafted in 18ct yellow gold and displaying the graceful floral and nature-inspired design so beloved during the Edwardian era. This exceptional necklace is adorned with vibrant pink sapphires, vivid green demantoid garnets and lustrous seed pearls arranged within an elegant series of floral motifs and delicate swag drops. Three articulated pink sapphire drops provide gentle movement and catch the light beautifully when worn, whilst the demantoid garnets add flashes of vivid green that perfectly complement the rich gold setting. The intricate craftsmanship and romantic design epitomise the refined elegance of the Edwardian period. Rarely encountered today, necklaces of this quality and originality were often commissioned as special occasion pieces and remain highly sought after by collectors of fine antique jewellery. Beautifully balanced and remarkably wearable, this exquisite necklace sits elegantly at the neckline and would make a wonderful addition to an important antique jewellery collection, a unique heirloom, or a memorable gift for someone who appreciates exceptional period jewellery....
