Description

A pair of atmospheric seascapes in oil on board depicting sailing boats in a squall off the coastline, probably Suffolk. They are in very good original condition and housed in walnut frames with a gilded inner slip. Each one signed by the artist. Circa 1870. The artist, John Moore, was well known for his maritime paintings and is so rooted to his locality that he was called John Moore of Ipswich, although he was born in Woodbridge. 2021 marks 200 years since his birth and a chance to celebrate Moore's artworks. There are over 40 paintings by Moore in the Ipswich collection and his work has been gifted, purchased, and left in bequests over the years. Moore was born in Woodbridge, Suffolk and baptised in February 1821. The son of Martin Moore, a plumber, painter and decorator and Elizabeth Warren. The young John was apprenticed to the trade of plumbing and signwriting but not much is known about his early life. Woodbridge had an interesting community of artists and it could be that Moore became familiar with the work of Thomas Churchyard, George James Rowe and the many places for sketching by the River Deben. He is likely to have been self-taught as an artist and we hav...
