Description

A fabulous vintage 1950s triple strand cultured pearl bracelet, beautifully arranged in three graceful rows and finished with a sparkling sterling silver marcasite clasp. The pearls are a soft creamy ivory colour with a lovely deep lustre. Each pearl is individually knotted, giving the bracelet a traditional quality finish and allowing the three strands to sit beautifully on the wrist. The bracelet is divided into three neat sections with vertical silver spacers, helping the strands to keep their elegant shape when worn. The clasp is especially attractive. Crafted in sterling silver, it has a decorative openwork design set with sparkling marcasites and a central split pearl. The effect is wonderfully pretty, with a gentle Art Deco revival feel that was so popular in mid-century jewellery. This bracelet comes in its original brown tooled leather presentation box from J. W. Turner of Blackburn, which adds greatly to its charm and makes it a lovely gift or collector's piece. A classic and very wearable 1950s pearl bracelet, perfect for a wedding, special occasion, evening wear or simply for anyone who loves timeless vintage pearl jewellery.
