Description

An Early 19th C. Pine Serving Table of a great length. This wonderful piece of furniture has 4 drawers of varying sizes with iron cup handles, the second drawer from the left also has an iron loop and plate which in a previous life had a padlock. The base stands on 6 legs, the ones on the end having stretchers for added support. Having the original paint finish that has now crackled and bubbled over the years. The original top has been replaced with an old reclaimed Pine top of a good thickness. This piece started life as a Serving Table in a large country house but over the years has been used for many purposes, including a workbench, hence the splashes of paint on the base. It is certainly a unique piece full of history and character. It is in a very sturdy condition and would make an incredible kitchen island or centre table in a large country style kitchen.
