Description

An exceptional antique Edwardian satinwood painted display cabinet, dating to circa 1900, showcasing the elegance, refinement and craftsmanship that defined the finest furniture of the Edwardian period. Beautifully constructed in richly figured satinwood, this elegant bow front vitrine features sweeping curved glazed panels, a central glazed door and a wonderfully shaped architectural crest. The cabinet is further enhanced with exquisite hand-painted decoration depicting floral swags, ribbons, musical instruments and classical motifs, all highlighted with delicate gilded detailing. The interior is finished in an attractive blue silk-style lining and fitted with shaped glass display shelves, creating the perfect setting for porcelain, glassware, silver, collectibles or treasured decorative objects. The curved glazing allows light to flood the interior from multiple angles, ensuring displayed pieces are viewed to their fullest advantage. Raised on elegant tapering legs with fine painted embellishments, the cabinet displays a lightness and sophistication rarely found in modern furniture. The combination of satinwood veneers, hand-painted decoration and graceful proportion...
