Description

Charming 19th Century Painted Oak Country House Box or Chest – A delightful piece of English folk art, this 19th-century country oak chest is beautifully hand painted as a Georgian manor house façade. The exterior features neoclassical architectural details and Greco-Roman motifs, all finished in a wonderfully weathered patina that evokes an authentic English provincial farmhouse aesthetic. Crafted circa 1840, the box retains its original painted decoration and antique paper lining inside. The hinged top opens to reveal practical storage, and a brass handle adds both function and charm. Versatile in use, this characterful piece can serve as a small chest or storage box or as a decorative display piece in a country, rustic, or traditional interior. Full of personality and period charm, this original 19th-century Georgian house box is a highly decorative and evocative addition to any home or collection.
