Description

This magnificent large-scale portrait depicts the British court official and noble, Barbara Herbert, Countess of Pembroke (c.1688-1721). She was the second wife of Thomas Herbert, 8th Earl of Pembroke and 5th Earl of Montgomery (c.1656-1733). Born Barbara Slingsby, she was a daughter of Sir Thomas Slingsby, 2nd Baronet (1636-1688) and Dorothy Cradock (died 1673). The history of the Slingsby family is extensive and deeply rooted in Yorkshire, with their beginnings linked to the village of Slingsby and the manor of Scriven. As a distinguished family from Yorkshire, they played a significant role in both local and national matters, holding various governmental positions and producing notable individuals such as the Royalist Sir Henry Slingsby, whose diary offers valuable perspectives on the English Civil War. The family founded two baronetcies in the 17th century. Our sitter married three times. Firstly, to Sir Richard Mauleverer, 4th Baronet, of Allerton Mauleverer (died 1689). After his death, she married John Arundell, 2nd Baron Arundell of Terrace (1649-1698), of Trerice, Cornwall (died 1698) in 1692. As Lady Arundell, she had a son, Hon. Richard Arundell (1698-1...
