Description

An exceptional and highly decorative Regency flame mahogany sideboard of impressive scale and outstanding craftsmanship, dating to the early nineteenth century, circa 1830. Constructed from beautifully figured mahogany of remarkable colour and depth, this superb piece showcases some of the finest flame mahogany veneers we have handled in recent years. The rich timbers display striking movement throughout, enhanced by elegant ebony line inlays, architectural raised gallery, reeded columns and beautifully carved lion paw feet. The design combines practicality with sophisticated Regency styling. The central section features a series of drawers arranged beneath a shaped gallery back, while the two curved pedestal cupboards provide substantial concealed storage. The configuration allows the piece to function equally well as a sideboard, serving table, grand hall console or statement desk, making it particularly versatile for both period and contemporary interiors. The quality of construction is evident throughout, from the carefully selected veneers and crisply executed mouldings to the substantial proportions and elegant architectural form.
