Description

A fine antique Regency mahogany desk chair dating from around 1830, beautifully constructed with elegant proportions and the restrained design synonymous with the Regency period. Crafted from richly figured solid mahogany, this handsome chair would make an ideal addition to a study, library, home office or as an occasional chair. The shaped top rail incorporates an attractive spiral carved crest, flowing into elegantly curved reeded arms supported by turned uprights. The back is centred by a finely carved and moulded splat featuring a decorative floral roundel, adding subtle detail whilst maintaining the refined simplicity for which Regency furniture is renowned. The generously proportioned removable drop-in seat has been professionally upholstered in quality green material, providing both comfort and practicality. Drop-in seats were a desirable feature, allowing them to be easily removed for reupholstery or maintenance without dismantling the chair. Raised on elegant reeded sabre legs, the chair has a wonderfully balanced and graceful profile whilst remaining exceptionally sturdy. The beautifully figured mahogany has acquired a rich warm colour and mellow patina over ne...
