Description

This antique framed artwork appears to be a Georgian-era silk and needlework picture, possibly depicting a biblical or pastoral scene. Needlework Technique: Features intricate embroidery in silk thread, potentially combined with paint on silk. Some historical damage to the material, but still highly attractive and decorative as a period piece. Frame Details: Housed in a gilded wood-and-plaster frame, likely original to the period. Time Period: Items of this style typically date to the late 18th or early 19th century (Georgian or Regency era). Glass: The oval opening features a verre églomisé mat (glass with reverse painting or gilding).
