Description

Late 17th century Cornish ecclesiastical oak coffe with Gothic carved panels, untouched surface and strong regional character - Rare, atmospheric and deeply authentic Why We Love This ... Furniture of this age and integrity is increasingly rare, and this Cornish ecclesiastical coffe has that unmistakable presence that only centuries of quiet service can create. The untouched surface, the bold Gothic carving, the regional character - it all adds up to a piece that feels grounded, honest and deeply reassuring. It's the kind of object that doesn't shout for attention; it simply is - confident, atmospheric, and steeped in the rhythms of 17th century life.
