Description

A charming and authentic 18th-century French dressing table, beautifully crafted and full of period elegance. The piece features a shaped marble top, cool and finely grained, sitting over a delicately proportioned wooden base with the soft patina of age. The table retains its original mirror, framed in carved timber with graceful side supports typical of late-18th-century provincial design. Below, a single drawer with its original hardware provides practical storage while preserving the table's understated refinement. The legs are gently curved in the early Louis XVI style, united by a turned stretcher that adds both stability and decorative interest. The overall silhouette is light, feminine, and unmistakably French, making it an ideal accent for a bedroom, dressing room, or boutique interior seeking genuine period charm.
