Description

A charming Edwardian ebonised stool with turned legs and a neatly upholstered seat - a versatile, characterful piece ideal for bedrooms, dressing rooms, or occasional seating. Why We Love This ... There is something wonderfully unpretentious about a well-made Edwardian stool - its appeal lies in its balance and compact footprint. This one has a quiet elegance: the proportions are just right, ebonised legs with gentle turning gives it definition, and an upholstered seat in an eye-catching fabric that softens the silhouette. It possesses a note of individuality without feeling overstated - it quietly elevates a room while remaining entirely practical. It's the sort of piece that slips effortlessly into any room - useful, decorative, and full of period charm without demanding attention.
