Description

A Regency rosewood card table, circa 1800, with elegant proportions, later painted decoration, and its original baize - a settled, characterful piece with true country/house charm. Why We Love These ... There is something particularly appealing about this table's country/house presence. It feels settled and authentic rather than over-restored, retaining the character one hopes to find in a Regency piece that has been in use for over two centuries. The later painted decoration adds individuality, while the survival of the old baize lends a reassuring sense of continuity and history.
