Description

English Edwardian mahogany 3-seater settee, circa 1910, with a finely carved Chippendale-style back and lion-paw feet. Beautiful crisp carving, elegant proportions and superb legs. Sound upholstery requiring a new top cover – a wonderful opportunity to customise this timeless piece. Why We Love This ... This Edwardian settee has everything you want from early 20th-century English furniture: beautifully crisp carving, superb proportions, and that unmistakable Chippendale-style back with its pierced splats and flowing lines. The lion-paw feet give it presence and personality, grounding the piece with a sense of strength and craftsmanship. It's elegant without being fussy, decorative without being over-the-top - the perfect balance of refinement and usability. And because the upholstery is sound but ready for a new top cover, it offers the ideal opportunity to make it your own: linen for a relaxed country house look, velvet for a touch of glamour, or a patterned fabric for a more traditional scheme. This is a settee that elevates a room the moment it enters it. At a Glance – Appeal, Desirability & Collectibility •
