Description

Superb Quality Large 19th-Century Mahogany Two-Tier Revolving Bookcase An attractive 19th-century mahogany revolving bookcase with slatted sides, square solid mahogany top with a moulded edge, above a two-tiered bookshelf with quarter sections divided by plain mahogany slats running from top to base, fastened with brass studs. The whole stands on cross stretchers with a revolving framed iron base and iron fittings, terminating in ceramic castors. The piece has a superb original colour and patina. In terms of condition, this revolving bookcase is in excellent original state, boasting a rich patina on the solid mahogany, which speaks to its quality craftsmanship and the care it has received over the years. The figured mahogany exhibits a rich, warm patina, enhancing its visual appeal. This tall bookcase is not only a testament to exceptional early Victorian craftsmanship but also a striking example of classic design, making it an ideal piece for any refined interior. Height 92.5cm (36.4in) Width 60.5cm (23.8in) Depth 60.5cm (23.8in)
