Description

An absolutely stunning early 19th century silver table made of solid Padauk with a fine fretwork carved gallery, twin boarded top and wonderfully detailed cluster column legs. . Heavy and sturdy, the table was made to display silver and would have belonged to a wealthy household and placed in an area where it could be seen and admired by visitors to the house. . The hand carved detailing to the table is superb with a pierced fretwork gallery, a wide open fretwork carved band of Gothic motifs to the apron and intricately carved large beautiful Gothic spandrels. . The cluster column legs each have three ring turned spindles conjoined by squared braces and terminate in squared and stepped feet. The stretchers with matching ring turnings and joined with a central X brace. In excellent original condition with only small marks and dings and some tiny old restorations to a small section of the gallery consistent with age and use. . Padauk is a particularly slow growing, densely grained and heavy wood with a beautiful colour. . Its durability and rich colour made it a very desirable exotic hardwood and it was particularly popular with the London cabinet makers who sought it for ...
