Description

ELEGANT NEOCLASSICAL PALE GREEN SILK CURTAIN PANELS. A fine pair of antique curtain panels, made from luxurious and luminous silk. I would describe the colour as a pale chartreuse or olive-green and the fabric features a subtle sheen and fine natural slubs which gives the fabric beautiful texture and depth. The main body of the green fabric is delicately woven with a small, repeating slightly contrasting caramel sprig/floral motif which is distributed evenly across the panels and picked up in the fringing and wide border. The curtains leading inner edges and the bottom hems are framed with a wide, decorative jacquard or brocade trim in a contrasting muted caramel tone. This border features an intricate classical foliage and geometric pattern. Additionally the very edges of the curtains are finished with a delicate, matching short brush fringe (or bullion fringe trim) that enhances their charm and frames them softly. These panels are generously long, and may be (at just over three metres) designed to elegantly puddle on the floor, which is characteristic of such grand, historic European drapery. Attached at the top are the original hanging hoops which are gilt bra...
