Description

A large mid 19th century pine dresser base or sideboard, possibly originating from the Lancashire area, standing on turned bun feet with seven drawers in total, and decorative turned mouldings at each side. The upper three drawers have shaped fronts and a hidden finger pull recess on the underside. The dresser has a lovely blonde colour and a nice amount of wear reflecting its use through the years. It is more common to see this style of dresser base with a central cupboard, but this one instead has four nice wide drawers, plus the three above, which I think makes it more practical. It would work well in a kitchen or dining room for storing crockery and cutlery etc. Condition: Overall this is in very good condition with the wear and patina you would expect from an item of this age. The drawer handles are not original and one of them doesn't completely cover the hole left by a previous handle - please see the photos. One of the drawers has a small piece of new timber spliced into the top edge. All the drawers open and close well. A lovely piece of furniture! Dimensions: Width - 181cm Depth - 56.5cm Height - 93cm maximum including upstand, 84.5cm height to the top. ...
