Description

A Very Good Quality Late 19th Century Mahogany Quartetto Nest Of Four Coffee Tables, Having Well Figured Rectangular Tops With Satinwood Banded Decoration And Cockbeaded Mouldings, Raised On Elegant Turned Upright Supports, United By Cross Stretchers And Sabre Shaped Feet. Dating to the late 19th century, but in the Georgian style as is common for this period these tables are very good quality and extremely useful indeed. The top of each table is constructed from well figured, rich mahogany timber with elegant cross banded decoration. The combination of these features creates a good contrast and an elegant look in combination with the cockbeaded panelling. These tables are in good, solid, functional condition, with very little restoration or existing damage to speak of. It is worth noting that we have had many similar nests of this period and they are regularly found with rudimentary repairs to smashed legs, or with tops that have faded to a totally different colour with large splits down the middle of them. Therefore its clear that this particular nest has been well loved, cherished and used throughout its life. As with all items which we offer for sale they have be...
