Description

Superb 17thC Dutch Marquetry Cabinet on Stand Baroque Period with Pewter Inlay Brief Description: This is a rare and exceptional 17th-century Dutch Baroque marquetry cabinet on stand, dating to circa 1660–1670, and boasting a truly outstanding patina. The cabinet features a pair of raised ripple-moulded panelled doors which open to reveal a finely appointed interior with a full-width shelf and two compartments, divided by three elegant engaged ring-turned columns. Beneath sits a long drawer adorned with three boldly carved lion-mask mounts, all raised upon four attractive cup-and-cover legs terminating in substantial bun feet. The exterior is profusely decorated with exquisite period floral marquetry, complemented by exceptionally rare pewter inlay. The central doors are embellished with a pair of finely executed classical nymph figures surrounded by scrolling floral motifs. At the same time, the cabinet as a whole incorporates no fewer than eleven beautifully inlaid classical figures—a remarkable decorative feature seldom encountered. An outstanding example of Dutch Baroque craftsmanship, this cabinet possesses exceptional presence and superb structural integrity. A...
