Description

A charming converted Victorian mahogany washstand, dating from circa 1860, of compact proportions. The rectangular moulded top is supported by square chamfered legs with attractively shaped scalloped friezes beneath, above an open undertier and a single frieze drawer retaining its brass drop handle. The base is united by a decorative shaped X-form stretcher. Originally constructed as a washstand, the piece has been sympathetically converted by the removal of the original superstructure, creating an attractive and practical lamp, side or bedside table. The drawer retains its original hand-cut dovetail construction, and the table displays a warm, well-figured mahogany patina with good colour throughout. A versatile Victorian occasional table, equally suited to a traditional or contemporary interior.
